Groundbreaking ceremonies set for church remodeling project

Groundbreaking ceremonies for a remodeling project at Westminster Presbyterian Church, 2200 Wabash Ave., have been scheduled Sunday, after regular morning worship.

Church services start at 10:45 a.m. and the groundbreaking ceremony is to take place at about noon on the north side of the church. The public is invited.

The major portion of the remodeling project will involve construction of a new stairwell and housing for an elevator on the northeast corner of the existing church structure.

In addition to an elevator shaft, work is to be done on the church's main level to install new restrooms, a cry room for infants, and a room to serve as a library and lounge.

The church's upper level is to be remodeled for classrooms and a church office.

On the basement level, work is to include addition of classrooms and upgrading of existing restrooms.

Much of the major work is to be done by a professional contractor, but congregation members will do some of the labor themselves.

Most of the work is to be completed sometime next year, according to the Rev. Riehard Baumer, pastor.

Scheduled to participate in the ceremony Sunday are Baumer; Bill Maurer, chairman of the church trustees; Ron Smith, chairman of the church building committee; Paul Muse, member of the building committee; Helen Shields, a member of the church; and Tim Ross, president of the church's youth group.
